Mark Warner

Bipartisanship Gets Results

While Congress is gripped by bitter partisan division, Mark Warner is one of the few who works in good faith with Democrats and Republicans.

Strengthening Medicare

He forged a bipartisan compromise to ensure fair Medicare reimbursement rates, so seniors can keep seeing the doctors of their choice.

Promotes Early Detection

He is working to expand access to medical screenings that can detect disease at early stages when treatment is more effective and costs less.

Virginia doctors support Mark Warner

The American College of Radiology Association PAC has endorsed several Republicans and Democrats running in this year's elections. After reviewing the record and policy positions of both candidates for the U.S. Senate from Virginia, we endorse Mark Warner because he is the best choice for the patients we serve.
